

THE BRITISH REFLEXOLOGY ASSOCIATION

2012 REGIONAL LECTURE DAY

'Reflexology for Pain Relief' – with Lee Taylor

DATE

Saturday 30th June 2012

VENUE

Holiday Inn Oxford, Tolkien Room, Peartree Roundabout, Woodstock Road, Oxford, OX2 8JD

GUEST LECTURER

Lee Taylor: Lee has now been living and breathing reflexology for fifteen years and trained a large number of students from all over the world. He has previously set up a reflexology clinic within the UK NHS for cancer patients, and guest lectured at conferences around the world, including London, Rome, Los Angeles, Cairns and Wellington. Since then, he has become a regular speaker, presenter, author and teacher within the reflexology world but still retains his roots as a practitioner. His work has been translated into several languages.

THEME

'Reflexology for Pain Relief'. The lecture day will be structured as follows:

- Concept of pain from the physiological perspective, how pain is measured, the pain gate theory, ANS response, hormonal involvement.
- How the pain gate theory ties in to the concept of reflexology and pressure therapy
- The spiritual significance and importance of pain
- The various applications of pressure within reflexology and how they provide pain relief
- An examination using three specific Effective Reflexology TM techniques to bring about pain relief

There will be an equal balance between theory work and practical effort
